Definition of bullying:

Research has shown that a fixed definition of bullying behaviour may be too rigid, but exploring the concept within school and developing a shared understanding of bullying is essential.

The Department for Education and Skills 'Don't suffer in Silence' pack states that there are many different definitions of bullying, but most consider it to be:

- Deliberately hurtful (including aggression)
- Repeated often over a period of time
- Difficult for victims to defend themselves from

Bullying can take many forms, but three main types are:

- Physical – hitting, kicking, taking belongings
- Verbal – name calling, insulting, making offensive remarks
- Indirect – spreading nasty stories about someone, exclusion from social groups, being made the subject of malicious rumours, text messages and e-mails – “cyber bullying”.

Vulnerable Groups:

There are specific groups of individuals who are more vulnerable to experiencing bullying:

- Looked After Children
- Traveller Children
- Children vulnerable to Racism
- Children vulnerable to Homophobia
- Children with disability – The key duties of schools are: Not to treat disabled pupils less favourably; and to make reasonable adjustments to avoid putting disabled people at a substantial disadvantage.
- Children with SEN – Setting suitable learning challenges, responding to pupils' diverse learning needs, overcoming potential barriers to learning and assessment for individuals and groups of children.
- Children with SEN are 2 or 3 times more at risk of being bullied.
- They are also more at risk of taking part in bullying others.
- Particular characteristics may make them an obvious 'target'
- In some mainstream settings children may be less well integrated socially and lack the protection against bullying which friendship gives.

We hope that our actions and ethos prevent bullying at Ashgate School but it is important to remember that our pupils are members of one or more of these vulnerable groups. As such they may be involved in bullying elsewhere in their lives and school staff should remain alert to this and if necessary offer support to the pupil and their family.
